ABSTRACT

Methods and apparatus that provide proper identification of visual and neurological abilities related to defects in the neurological component of the brain, that improve visual and neurological performance, and that develop improved neural performance in the brain and nervous system. All of these methods are carried out over a communications network such as the Internet.